Compulsory REVISION comments	I would first like to congratulate the authors. However, there are inconsistent and different data at work. There are presentations different from the percentages that need to be reviewed, in order for the work to be presented again. The value of the information contained is precious, but needs polishing and restructuring. Aside from statistics and the denomination should be better worked out, as pointed out in the comments in the article's archive. I hope I have contributed and would like to review the work again when it is rebuilt and submitted again.
