| Compulsory REVISION comments | The article is well written and contextualized, allowing the reader a clear understanding of the main issue of the text. It is organized to understand the logic of the text and its subdivisions. However, there is a need for scientific structuring of the text, as it lacks the methodological description of the research and epistemological foundations. Need to make this inclusion. | |
| Minor REVISION comments | The article aims to present the occupations of young people in rural areas. Regarding the purpose of the article, I understand that what I proposed was presented. However, it would be very rich to deepen the questions presented. Like 100% of young people, they dedicate themselves to adult education. What kind of adult education are we dealing with in the countryside? Do you know Paulo Freire? The text speaks of class education, political education. This attracts me to say that class and youth and adult education in the rural area dialogues fully with the Brazilian writer Paulo Freire. I refer that the article could suffer additions, expansion bringing more elements of the research and mainly the voices of the interviewees. Why the participation of community activities? How important is this participation for the research subjects? | |
| Optional/General comments | The authors have in their hands a beautiful field of research that may be of worldwide interest. broaden the look of the research and bring the research subjects into the text. Do not forget to describe the methodological and epistemological paths of the research. | |
