Minor REVISION comments	Good Idea, but notes the following: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Except otherwise state, all regressing macroeconomic data that are not stationary can result to a spurious result which can be misleading in policy direction. Thus, all macroeconomic data are expected to be subjected to a unit root test first to determine their stationarity. If data are found out not to be stationary at all, then there is no need to regress them. 2. The author need to give a brief description of a relevant theory 3. Finally, state the equation describing the method used.
