Minor REVISION comments	In this case report, the authors aimed to evaluate the place of Hysteroscopy in the diagnosis of secondary postpartum hemorrhage after cesarean section. Overall the manuscript is well written. When the article is evaluated in general, it would be more appropriate to give information about the incidence and prevalence of the subject. When similar cases were examined, ultrasonographic evaluation is emphasize , which is a non-invasive method, such as in the references in the article. Hysterechopic evaluation specified in the article is an invasive procedure and requires user experience. However, authors can bring a different perspective to hysteroscopy, which is a minimally invasive approach.
