Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments	The Article is written in a definitive form. Already in the title we have Errors related to... Although there seems to be evidence for a possible negative gravitational effect, I would have stated this in a softer form. If the author thinks that Einstein's equations might have problems then he should consider that there is as well a possibility that the author has overlooked something. Any critique in the direction of the Nobel Prize committee seems me an expression of envy that should have no room in a scientific article. The Nobel Prize committee has rewarded their prizes according to the understanding of their time. Since science evolves there are new visions that replace older. That allows new people to obtain that prize. It never disqualifies the others.
Optional/General comments
